Schadeberg made it look like a snap

In a book which represents the flavour of the times, iconic photographer Jurgen Schadeberg tells the story of his rise to fame in the photographic business, writes Vivien Horler

Y ou could call Shadrack Sonjica a name-dropper, but that would be unfair. The fact is, he just happened to know some pretty famous people. He interviewed them and he took their pictures. And, while you might not be familiar with his name, you’ll recognize many of his pictures that appeared in magazines. The work of Shadrack Sonjica is the subject of Jurgen Schadeberg’s new book, to be published by De Klerk Books on 22 October. Sonjica was a friend of Schadeberg and his wife, Ryno, before they moved to the United States.
